

Development: Design

The Moen Cascata lavatory faucet was conceived as an expression of natural water flow to create a more engaging product experience. Water flow is controlled by tipping the spout itself—like tipping a pitcher of water. This gestural interface elegantly addresses universal design principles, requiring only gross motor skills to use.

